

Lab Report Instructions General Instructions:

- Your lab report must include all the lab tasks we have completed so far.
- No handwritten copy is required. You must submit the report as a hard copy

Each report must be checked for plagiarism.

1. Formatting:

- Use standard formatting: Font size 12, Times New Roman, 1.5 line spacing.
- Number pages sequentially.

2. Report Structure:

Follow the structure provided below to organize your report logically and coherently.

3. Title Page

- Course name:
- Course Code:
- Name and roll number of the student.
- Date of submission.
- Instructor's name and department.

4. Each Problem Should Have:

1. Experiment No.

- Write the experiment number.

2. Problem Name

- Mention the name of the problem or task you worked on.

3. Objective

- State the purpose of the experiment in one or two sentences.

4. Code

- Insert a clear screenshot of your code editor showing the program.

5. Output

- Show the program's execution with a screenshot clearly showing the input and corresponding output.

6. Results and Discussion

- Summarize what you achieved.

8. Conclusion

- Write what you learned from this experiment in 1-2 sentences.

LAB TASK

1. Write an assembly language program to take two inputs from the user and display both inputs on the screen.
2. Write an assembly language program to take two inputs, swap their values, and display the swapped result.
3. Write an assembly language program to print your Name, Roll, and Batch on the screen.
4. Write an assembly language program to take two inputs from the user, perform addition and subtraction and display the result.
5. Write an assembly language program to take a lowercase character input to uppercase equivalent and vice versa.
6. Write an assembly language program that convert hexa value to decimal value.